DP
SHE'S LIKE THE PIED PIPER OF BAD ADVICE!
IT'S THE WRONG PATH!

BY SARA ALGASE

Dear Cheryl,
Last night I gained two pounds at a party! My boyfriend thinks I'm too fat. I keep gaining weight. -- Lyla, Whitney, Canada

Dear Lyla,
It's not really that possible to gain two pounds at a party unless you ate their toaster oven. But if you're concerned about your weight,consult a doctor for a safe and healthy diet that lets you lose weight slowly while getting proper nutrition. About the boyfriend who thinks you're too fat, tell him to be quiet. Boyfriends should be seen and not heard. -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I'm twelve years old and my brother has a friend who I like a lot! He's fourteen. I've tried perfume, cute hairstyles, winking, drop-dead gorgeous outfits but he just doesn't get it! I'm way too shy to try anything direct so don't even suggest it. (I'm afraid of rejection.) -- A Girl Who's Tried Everything She Can Think Of, Clarkston, WA

Dear Girl Who's Tried Everything She Can Think Of,
What's with this guy? Is his baseball cap covering his eyes? Maybe you can ask your brother to find out if this guy likes you and drop a few hints that you like him. Isn't that what big brothers are for? -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
There's a boy I like named Ronnie. He has dreamy blue eyes, messy brown hair, and cute freckles. But he likes one of my best friends, Justine. Some of my friends have even tried to set him up with me but he doesn't like me. -- Andrea, Toronto, Canada

Dear Andrea,
Don't you hate guys who have the nerve to actually like your best friend? This guy obviously doesn't know a good thing when he sees one. Date his best friend and maybe it'll make him jealous. Even if that doesn't work, at least you'll have a date for the prom! -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I know how to dress cool like you, but my mom won't let me go out in short-shorts and cutoff tops. Also, if I wear short skirts, short-shorts or tight pants my legs look fat. How can I dress well so my legs don't look fat? Also, how can I get my mom to let me leave the house dressing the way I want to?
-- Clueless, Yonkers, NY

Dear Clueless,
No one has a perfect body. Even I have been known to get a squishy stomach when I eat too much Thanksgiving dinner. But enough about me. If you don't want your legs to show, find a pretty, long skirt or a pair of loose pants. It is possible to look classy and fetching at the same time. Plus, your mom will probably be more likely to let you out of the house and it's awful hard to get dates if you're stuck inside. -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
My name is George. My girlfriend Leslie is really neat. I really like her, but she dumped me for another guy. I'm really angry. The guy she likes is a major jerk. My sister says she's not the girl for me. What can I do? -- George, San Antonio, TX

Dear George,
The thing you have to understand about women, George, is that for some stupid reason they get attracted to handsome, jerky guys. Give her a few years. She'll realize this guy is nothing but trouble and she'll want someone nice like you. In the meantime, do you have my number? -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I used to have a boyfriend named Mark. We broke up about four months ago. Now that I want to go back out with him, he won't. He became a skateboarder and he thinks he's too good for most people. -- Puzzled, Nova Scotia, Canada

Dear Puzzled,
There's nothing worse than a conceited ex-boyfriend! Don't let him think for a second you're pining over him (even if you are). You'd be better off dating a new sweetie and then show him off to your ex whenever possible! That may sound mean, but if you want nice, go ask Betty or Veronica! -- Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I have a friend named Felicia. She always lies. She once lied about a whale at lunch in school last year. She said it eats stonefish but that it ate a stone by mistake and its teeth popped out. How can I get her to stop? – Very Mad, Irvine, CA

Dear Very Mad,
I'd be very mad if I were you too. What is your friend talking about whales and stonefishes for when there are so many other exciting things to talk about? For example: who's wearing what and who's dating who. Isn't she interested in these things? Tell her that the next time she makes up a lie, it better be a juicy one! – *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I'm seven years old. I like telling people jokes but nobody laughs at them. Help me please. – Nicee, Long Beach, CA

Dear Nicee,
It's better to say nothing than to tell a joke nobody laughs at. How embarrassing! Practice at home in front of the mirror and try the joke on a friend before you bring it out in public. It also helps to steal jokes from sitcoms. -- *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I'm an eleven year old with a big problem. My whole class makes fun of me and a friend (who's a boy). They say that I kissed him but I didn't. I need some help fast before sixth grade starts.
-- Kristen, Eagan, MN

Dear Kristen,
It sounds like some juicy gossip is following you around. I say take advantage of it. Anything that gets people talking about you and a possible romantic link makes you seem more popular and sought after. Use your newfound fame to win friends and interest boyfriends.
– Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
This guy said he liked me. I also like him. I'm a cheerleader so I go to his football games. At the last game he had blue ink on his arm. It said "Samantha," my name with a heart around it. Everyone laughed. I'm so embarrassed. – Samantha, Hermitage, TN

Dear Samantha,
That was sure sweet of him. But you might want to tell him that the next time he wants to show his affection for you, you'll settle for flowers or candy. It's more practical and he won't have to spend so much time washing it off. – *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
Almost every girl in school has someone who has a crush on them except for me. What should I do?
–Helpless, Calgary, Canada

Dear Helpless,
Gee, I have the opposite problem. Every guy in school has a crush on me! But getting back to your situation, have you tried eyeliner and fluffy hair? If you have big hair, guys are more likely to get crushes on you. I know this from experience. – *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I'm ten years old. I like this boy named Justin. He talks to me and tries to look me in the eyes. How do I know if he likes me? What should I do? Plus, he's almost fourteen. Is it okay if he's that much older than me?
-- Sarah, San Luis Obispo, CA

Dear Sarah,
Older guys are okay to date unless they're so old they can't chew their own food. This guy sounds okay, plus it sounds like he likes you. It takes courage for a guy to look you in the eyes! Look him in the eyes and say something dramatic like, "If you don't ask me out soon, I just won't be able to stand it!" -- *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
Do you have any great flirting tips that work? -- Jennifer, Sacramento, CA

Dear Jennifer,
All my flirting tips work for me, but then again, I am Cheryl Blossom. Okay, here are a few: If you drop a pen or a barrette near the guy you like, he'll pick it up for you, and then you can give him a heart-melting smile and a demure "Thank you." If he sneezes during class, be the first one to hand him a tissue. Make sure you've written your phone number on the back of it -- the part he doesn't wipe his nose on! -- *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
Other girls say I wear my hair the same way all the time. But if I wear my hair down it gets messy. Please help me! -- Kerry, Marksville, LA

Dear Kerry,
Your friends are right. If you wear your hair the same way all the time it gets bo-ring! Try a braid, a bun, or a high-up ponytail. I comb my hair every few hours to keep it from getting knotted and messy. You should try this, too. Of course, comb your hair in the girl's bathroom, it's only polite. -- *Cheryl

Dear Cheryl,
I met this really cute guy on the bus on the way to camp. I even went to the camp dance with him. But then on the last day of camp I didn't get his phone number. What should I do? -- Monica, Washington, D.C.

Dear Monica,
Let that be a lesson to you. The next time you spot a hunk at camp, make sure you get his phone number, even before your duffel bag is unpacked! But for now, maybe you can tell your heartbroken love story to a camp director. He or she might take pity on you and help you locate your lost camp-boy. -- *Cheryl
